Pakkabill Product description

In the pre-GST era, majority of businesses used to issue invoices manually. Some of the businesses used self designed templates of MS-Excel or MS-Word while a few of the businesses used standard templates provided by various accounting software’s to issue invoices.

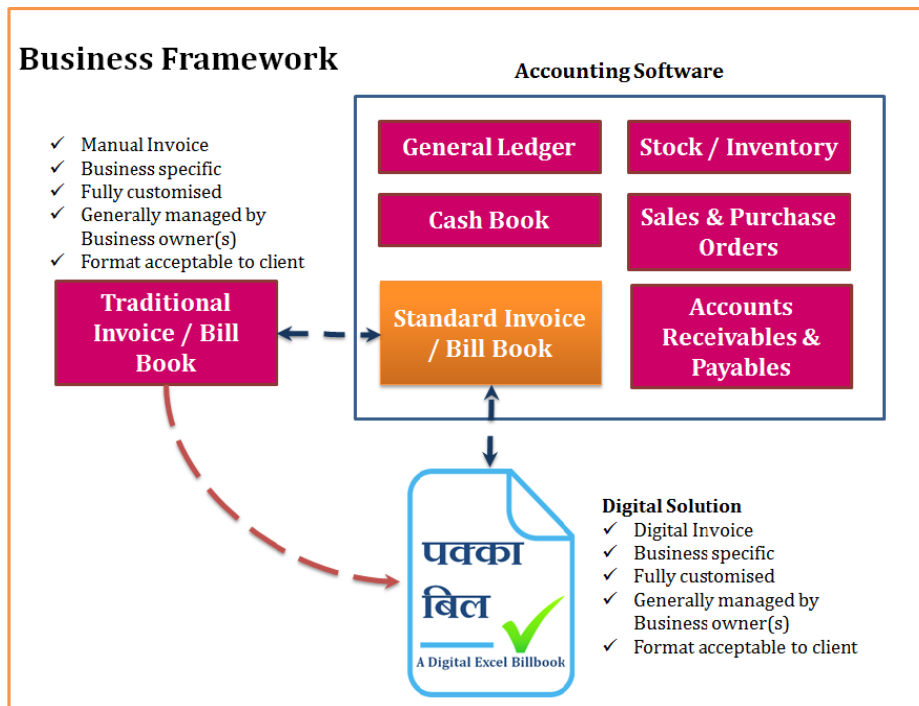

GST introduced businesses to the Digital world. First step on this journey is to find a right solution for the invoicing needs. Most of the businesses tend to opt for Accounting system without realising that there is a difference between Invoice and Accounting system. Accounting system is generally standards based; follow defined guidelines as per the defined standards and need professional skills to operate, whereas Invoicing on the contrary is specific to business and its identity, fully customised, generally managed by business owner(s) and subjected to client’s approval.

For a sale to take place, Invoice needs to meet the following:

1. It should be specific to business needs and its identity
2. It should be compliant with the applicable laws
3. It should be in a format acceptable to the client

Invoice is just an entry point to an accounting system.

Though, Accounting software(s) do provide Invoice generation facility, but with limited or no customisation options. MSME segment represent a major share of the overall businesses in India. They are faced with multiple challenges like to adapt to the digital era, customisation issues and lack of technical know-how / training that too simultaneously carrying out with their business.
